

- Very large differences in the energy intensity of manufacturing industry based on market exchange rates
- Comparison at purchasing power parities is more relevant as closer to technical energy efficiency as most of value added is made of salaries, and is thus function of relative values of living costs (i.e. purchasing power parities)

Comparison of energy intensities in manufacturing (2008)

