

The energy performance of cement production is linked to the share of clinker produced in the country in relation to the cement production: the higher this ratio, the higher the specific energy consumption. Distance to the red line (best practice) indicates the potential of energy saving

Benchmarking of the specific energy consumption of cement

